

Technology Integration

The typical health care enterprise consists of three staff populations:

- Clerical
- Management (includes executives, line managers, & supervisors)
- Professionals

Most systems result in paper output and are designed to satisfy the needs of the first two categories. At Medirex we recognize that the core competency of a health care institution rests with its professionals. Yet most health care computer systems merely provide clerical and management tools.

Medirex's emphasis on technology integration through people, automated systems and process ensures that the enterprise realizes the gains from its productivity strategies - throughout the organization.
